Source instructions

Dear fellow crocheters, I'm pretty late to jump on this bandwagon, as the Mandalorian TV series has been out for a good few months already, but better late than never!

Contents Links: Get the PDF pattern from my shop or Ravelry Save it on Pinterest My husband and I recently watched Season 1 of the Mandalorian and were struck by how adorable Baby Yoda is!! I don't know much about the Star Wars universe, but I do know that "The Child" is absolutely precious and I now get what the hype is over this little fella!

I wanted to recreate one for my husband, so I set out designing it in yarn form! Designing his head and ears was actually super fun!

I also had to make Yoda with his plump, little body. Look at those chubby legs!

Here's a shot of him getting stitched together so he wasn't all in pieces. He's pretty cute without clothes too, wouldn't you agree?

I couldn't let him go running around butt-naked and without his trademark outfit, so I whipped up a little jacket for him, and then a collar / scarf sort of thing to wrap around his neck.

I also dabbed the insides of his ears and his cheeks with a pink blush powder. Easy-peasy! So here's my little guy, all finished, standing at his proud height of 4.75 inches (~12 centimeters)!

I had a lot of fun designing my version of Baby Yoda and would love to share the free pattern with you! The finished doll is sure to bring smiles and make a wonderful, handmade gift for any Star Wars fan!

I just love how he fits into my hands. I think he's so cute that I want to make an entire army of these Baby Yoda inspired dolls now!

Update: I've crocheted an even tinier version, which I call the Tiny Baby Yoda (free pattern) ! This design comes with a complete video tutorial on my YouTube channel as well. Finishing Instructions Stuff the head and body well. Using a yarn needle, sew both arms to the body.

Crease the top edge of the ears and sew them to both sides of the head.

Sew the head to the body. Make sure to add any final bits of stuffing before sewing the opening shut.

Help Baby Yoda wear his jacket, and then his collar/scarf. You may use the long tail end of the collar to stitch it in place.
